

Abstract: the authors refer a large gap between the political level and the implementation level, which results from a democratic deficit of the EU (visible in the high levels of abstention in the recent elections for the European Parliament) and from the excessive predominance of the political and economic factors over the cultural factor in the Bologna process.