

Abstract:

The main political objective – increasing access to higher education in Portugal – was clearly and consistently defined, and it aimed to substantially change the system. However, there were also some secondary objectives, which, while also quite important, were not so clearly spelled out or were not consistently pursued. Objectives such as giving priority to areas relevant to the national economy or the pursuit of quality were many times sacrificed to the dominant objective of improving participation in higher education at any cost.